The Quebecor Fund was created through Videotron Ltd., which provides over seven million dollars annually in broadcasting distribution undertaking contributions to the Canadian industry.

To date, through the Television Production Assistance Program – the 'Convergent Production Support Component', the 'Creation of Intellectual property Support Component', and the 'Production of Intellectual Property for the International Market Support Component' — and through the Film Production Assistance Program, the Quebecor Fund has helped producers and distributors produce numerous high-quality projects that have been broadcast on over 40 different Canadian networks and over 30 international networks. GENERAL RULES

General Eligibility Criteria

Applicants must have a legal personality operating in Quebec or Canada, depending on the program, be under Quebec or Canadian control, and have a head office in Quebec or Canada.

The applicant must hold all rights permitting the development, production, broadcasting and distribution of the production, and have a permanent financial interest in the project. To demonstrate that this requirement is respected, the applicant must provide the Quebecor Fund with the chain of intellectual property rights.

In the case of a co-production, the sum of the rights of each co-producer must total all the rights of any nature, including copyright, to permit the development, production, broadcasting and distribution of the production, without any time or territorial restrictions. The chain of intellectual property must demonstrate that this requirement is respected. An international co-production approved by Telefilm Canada/SODEC as a co-production subject to a formal agreement, is eligible if all other criteria established by the Quebecor Fund are met.

Projects or business models for which a financial contribution is requested may come from either one or several producers, distributors or broadcasters, as long as the project, whether for television, film or multi-platform, is dealt with as a single project and that a single application is filed with the Quebecor Fund. Moreover, if a project is filed as a co-production or partnership, a single representative must be given full authority in dealing with the Quebecor Fund. Throughout the process, any transmission of documents must combine and include all aspects of the project.

The project must be produced by Canadian artists, with the acknowledgment that the production must obtain the certification of Canadian Production as established by the accreditation system of the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC).
